Eric Rohmer: Realist and Moralism (A Midland Book) By Colin Crisp

Here, for the first time in English, is a comprehensive analysis of Eric Rohmer's work. Rohmer, an enormously influential figure in shaping postwar realist film theory, and later in the development of the French New Wave, has been largely ignored in film studies, while others of the New Wave movements such as Truffaut and Godard have received considerable attention. In Eric Rohmer: Realist and Moralism, Crisp thoroughly examines Rohmer's films, performing structuralist, psychoanalytical, and ideological analyses of each. He further evaluates the connections between these films and Rohmer's realist film theory. Finally, Crisp's impressive study situates Rohmer's work ideologically within the historical context of French cinema after World War II, and gives due recognition to the achievements of this director within the realms of film theory and filmmaking.

Editorial Review

From Library Journal

Perhaps best known for the films, My Night with Maud and Claire's Knee, Rohmer was a close associate of Andre Bazin and a sometime colleague of the group around Cahiers du Cinema. Although Rohmer claims to have rejected the auteurist theory, his films do indeed share a commonality of form and theme: an extreme surface calm, talkiness, and a concomitant absence of physical action, but with subtexts of intense conflict between the spiritual and material, the natural and the artificial, and self-indulgence and self-denial. Crisp, dean of humanities at Australia's Griffith University, presents a succinct and perceptive study of a filmmaker somewhat overshadowed by his contemporaries.
